The peach trees on Peach Tree Street, that famous thoroughfare in Atlanta (Ga.) cough a little bit in mid-day traffic.

On a brief trip to a press meeting there last week, 111 sensed, like many others, no doubt, that urban sprawl and congestion affect the peach blossoms in spring.

This was late October, however, and traffic moved slowly even before the rush hour load hit its peak.

Hearing a comment on the heavy run of cars, taxis and buses, an Atlantan said wryly; "We call the downtown area the 'parking lot' when things really are congested."

Atlanta must have been one of the first cities in the nation to grasp the value of foliage and ecore on main thoroughfares. Peach Tree Street is possibly one of the most beautiful sights in any metropolitan city. Trees were there, presumably, when the Yankees went through.

Now every city wants trees, shrubs, a little grass in the downtowns to break the monotony of asphalt and concrete, which now is becoming a component of the high rise office towers and apartments.

Atlanta is losing some of its old golf courses to housing kevelopments, one among numerous older cities giving up natural beauty for rows of new addresses.

Atlantans would be among leaders, like San Franciscans, who resent this infringement on tradition. People a few years ago in San Franciso rose up and stopped construction of a freeway along the Bay which would have obstructed a view they so cherish.

As we were saying, the peach trees sputter before they blossom now, the narrow streets having little room to yield to dense, two-way traffic. There's no more carbon in the air than most downtowns, but not many have miles of fruit blossoms to look upon in April.

Maybe it doesn't affect this arborial tradition now, but it is a problem which Atlantans sometime consider.

Things like congestion and smog and auto pollution shouldn't happen to people. Or peach blossoms. It is sad to contemplate even when miles of flowering buds respond to the wonder of life's renewal.

YOE-ELGIN TILT IS LAST HOME GAME

The Elgin Wildcats will challenge the Yoemen 8 p.m. Friday in the last 20AA homegame in Cameron.

A number of Cameron linemen have been on the sick list as the Wildcats seek to improve their 1-2 district record and the Yoemen seek to improve their 2-1 record, second behind undefeated Georgetown and Round Rock, who play Friday night.

If Cameron defeats Elgin and Round Rock defeats Georgetown, the final Yoe-Round Rock game could throw 20AA into a three-way tie with a Yoeman win both against Elgin and Round Rock.

Elgin has lost already to Georgetown, Round Rock and earlier to non-district competitors Giddings, Bastrop and Luling.

Coach Hal Stanislaw says Yoe linemen Bill Grey, Clint Schofield, Jack Raymond and Fritz have been sick or injured, missing practices this week.

He expects Ed Whitley and Ernie De La Rosa to return for some action Friday night. He says Joe Lewis may start at tight end and Lester Hays may see action at defensive end.

Starting backfield will probably be Richard Cummings at quarterback, Robert Brashear at lefthalf, Whitley if well at fullback and De La Rosa if well at righthalf.

Elgin has 225-pound Mike Saxon anchoring the line and halfback Cathy providing running sparks. He rates the Wildcats a "better than verage" passing team.

It is the last homegame for the 1970 Yoemen, who travel to Round Rock for what could be a 20AA "decision maker" if they win both games.

Stanislaw says Elgin is a quick ballclub and expects the Wildcats to be "up" for the Cameron game.

City Police Report Shooting Accident

City police reported a fairly quiet weekend with only one complaint called in on Halloween night, and an accidental shooting Saturday night.

Police said a Cameron juvenile came to the station and made a voluntary statement about the shooting incident. According to his statement, he and several other youths were riding in a car and stopped at Ritter's Service Station to fix a flat about 8:30 Saturday night.

The youth told police he was handing the pistol to another youth to look at when it accidentally fired. The bullet struck Freddie Lee Townsend, of Cameron, in the left shoulder.

Townsend was treated at a Temple hospital and released Sunday.

The juvenile was charged with simple assault in Justice of the Peace Jess Brock's Court and paid a fine.

Supt., Judge Explain Voting Place Change

Reasons for changing the voting place for Precinct 2 were explained by County Judge O. B. Harden and School Supt. D. R. Dodson in answer to Herald inquiry Tuesday.

The voting place was moved from the Yoe High School gym to 1205 North Central St., in the former Wendel Cryer house.

Supt. Dodson told The Herald that he had asked Judge Harden to change the voting place two years ago, after the 1968 general election. Dodson said having the gym tied up all day "put the school in a bind" because so many children were using the gym for classes.

He said enrollment increases and combining the public schools increased use of the gym. Six classes are scheduled for activities in the gym each day, he added.

Judge Harden said the County Commissioners had discussed the superintendent's request in 1968, but could not find a suitable alternative.

The Texas Election Code calls for elections to be held in a school house, fire station or other public building within the limits of the precinct. If no public building is available the Election Code allows renting or constructing a voting house.

"The school property is the only public building in Precinct 2," Harden said. He said he asked Supt. Dodson if another building at the school was available for use as a voting place, but Dodson suggested no alternatives.

Commissioners meeting in a called session last Friday decided to rent the Cryer residence for the day because it was the closest available location to the former polling place.

Harden said County Atty. John B. Henderson Jr. reviewed the Texas Election Code and said the voting place change was within the law.

Judge Harden said every effort had been made to publicize the change through the newspaper and radio. "We also contacted local churches asking them to announce the change, and we notified Republican and Democratic officials," he said.

He also noted that signs had been placed on 12th Street directing voters to the temporary Pct. 2 voting location.

PTA Program Will Feature Special Music At Ben Milam Tonight

A special program of music is planned for Cameron PTA Meeting Thursday (tonight) at 7:30 p.m. in Ben Milam Cafetorium. Mrs. Thomas Dusek, school music teacher, will present some of her ~~stude,ts~~ in the special program.

"Usually when we hear the words 'student involvement,' we think of riots and protests," said Mrs. Louis Hollas, PTA president, "but not so in the Cameron Schools."

"The students spend their time learning the basic 3 R's and other subjects that make for a well-rounded student. Music is one way we have of expressing our feelings and others enjoy the results," she added.

"Come and see a demonstration Thursday night that we can all be proud to say, 'this is what the Cameron Schools represent.'"

City OKs Pay Raise, PD Chief

City employees will receive a five percent salary increase following action by the City Council at a regular meeting Tuesday. Council also voted to name Felipe Martinez Chief of Police.

The salary increase will be retroactive to October 1, the start of the city's fiscal year. Mayor E. A. Perrin, in recommending the salary raise, said increased tax assessments added more funds to the city budget than had been anticipated earlier.

Martinez has been serving as acting chief of police since former Chief John Shearin resigned in mid - September to accept a post at Georgetown.

The motion to appoint the new chief came immediately after Mayor Perrin's recommendation, and the vote was unanimous. Mayor Perrin told Councilmen that he had only good reports on Martinez' work as acting chief.

In other business, Council reviewed a report from the street committee, and voted to have Streets Supt. Hale and the committee conduct a survey of several streets on Saturday.

SEN. TOWER ENDORSES UR PROJECT

U. S. Sen. John Tower has formally endorsed Cameron's urban renewal project, which is awaiting final approval by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) in Washington.

In a letter to George Romney, Secretary of HUD, Sen. Tower said he was formally endorsing Cameron's application for an urban renewal project "as a much needed program for the future growth and economic health of the city."

Tower noted that the application has been approved at the Regional level and is in Washington at this time.

The letter continued, "As Ranking Minority member of the Senate Housing Subcommittee, I well realize the budgetary limitations that you face in the Urban Renewal field, in view of the many applications that are sent into Washington.

"The city officials and I will cooperate in any way that you advise in regard to making the Cameron application as competitive with other applications as possible, to the end that the project be in an optimum postion for final approval and funding," Sen. Tower concluded.

A CHECK FOR MORE THAN $181,000 changed hands Friday at the Milam County Tax Office as Alcoa's Rockdale Works made its ad valorem tax payment on all updated plant facilities as of January 1, 1970. The payment, the highest county-state ad valorem paid to date by Rockdale Works, was made by Works Manager H. F. Chrisco (left), and Accounting Manager J. R. Burruss, to Valter White (center), Milam County Assessor - Collector. The almost constant growth at Rockdale Works in its near 20 year history has pumped millions of tax dollars into Texas and local economies.

Grass Roots Voting.....

An approximate two-million votes carried Democrats Lloyd Bentsen and Gov. Preston Smith past Republican challenges Tuesday, leading a Democratic majority back to Austin.

Lt.-Gov. Ben Barnes and five other Democratic candidates tripled or even quadrupled votes on little known GOP state challengers in expected easy wins.

Trends across the nation show Democratic wins in the state houses while Republicans won two senatorial seats and lost about 10 seats in the House, not unusual for off-year Congressional elections for the party in power.

Observers note the Democratic tradition gave an early lead to both the Governor's and Mr. Bentsen's contests with Paul Eggers and George Bush.

Economics seemed the issue in many states while law and order, both President Nixon and Vice President Agnew's rallying point, found support in a few key states, namely in New York, where Conservative Party James Buckley with 39 percent of the vote defeated both the Democrat and Republican.

In California, Sen. George Murphy was defeated by young Cong. Tunny while Governor Reagan defeated Democrat Jesse Unruh. Implications were not clear since a conservative was re-elected governor and a liberal was elected, defeating the conservative senator.

But losses in gubernatorial races in a number of states, neighboring Oklahoma for example, shifted strength back to Democrats, portending new bases for grass roots building for 1972.

The grass roots Democratic tradition in Texas kept back powerful efforts by Bush and Eggers. It appeared at press-time the percentage of vote was Democrats 54 percent, Republicans 46 percent.

Concern among Democrats a few weeks ago brought appeals for greater vote turnouts as it appeared possible less than 40 percent of the four million electorate might elect a senator and governor.

Question was whether the major effort for GOP wins in 16 key states was worth the exposure of President Nixon and Vice President Agnew to such a mixed voter reaction.

Economics, which was pushed as a Democrat issue versus law and order, generally identified with GOP campaigning, was its counter. In Midwest voting, like Indiana, industrial layoffs were making a difference in voting while non-metro areas were going GOP. The senatorial race there may not be officially counted for a week.

Conservative views did gain among Democratic winners, such as conservative Democrat Bentsen in Texas. The White House would consider his election an idealogical plus for Administration efforts in the Senate, most of last year met with liberal opposition.

With Texas voting in an off-year election, Texans voted their traditions, the non-metro vote counting heavily when two-party voting is more common in Texas cities.

It would take additional analysis to see what new direction, if any, the Tuesday electorate took. It would appear more Democratic at state level and mixed in the Congress.

"OKAY, NOW LET'S WORK TOGETHER FOR TEXAS"

OLD PHILOSOPHER

Dear editar:

I've heard it said that people who don't know history are doomed to repeat it, and probably the same applies to Algebra or Chemestry or anything else a student fails in, but in the larger meaning of the saying I ran across an item in a newspaper last night that bears it out.

According to it, the airlines in the U. S. lost 58 million dollars in the first half of this year. They blame it on rising operating costs and falling numbers of passengers. Too many empty seats, they said.

Don't you see how history is repeating itself? That was exactly the same story of the passenger trains.

Some people said passenger trains disappeared because the railroads discouraged train travel by giving lousy service and thinking up ways to make it inconvenient, while the railroads said it was because they were losing money.

Now I don't know anything about air travel, but I know a few people who do and they say once you get on a plane you can get where your're going in a satisfactorily short time, if the hijackers took some other plane, but lots of time you have to sit around the airport for an hour or so before taking off, after spending an hour getting there, and sometimes you have to circle around your destination an hour or so waiting for other planes to land, and when you do finally come down you have to wait a long while to get your luggage, and sometimes you don't get it at all if it went to Omaha when you were going to Cincinnati.

You can see where this is leading. Gradually the airlines will cut down on their passenger service, passengers will find the service isn't worth the trouble, and everybody will have to travel by car or stay at home.

If confined at home, with television what it is, a large segment of the population will go stark raving mad.

Clearly the airlines ought to take a refresher course in history.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

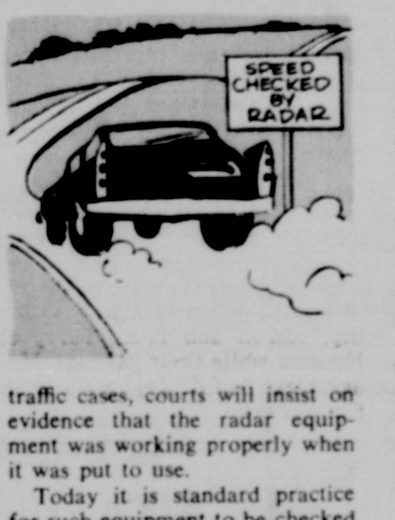
THE FAMILY LAWYER

Radar Vs. Motorist

Citizen Haines, given a ticket for speeding, determined to fight his case in court. At the hearing, officers relied on radar evidence to prove the charge against him. According to radar, Haines had indeed been travelling well over the speed limit.

But the police overlooked one thing. They failed to produce evidence that their radar equipment was in good working order on the day Haines was arrested. Result: he won an acquittal.

This case illustrates how the law, while accepting the benefits of technical progress, is also concerned with fair play for the individual. Almost everywhere, in traffic cases, courts will insist on evidence that the radar equipment was working properly when it was put to use.



Today it is standard practice for such equipment to be checked regularly. Usually this is done by tuning forks or by clocked road tests. Even so, some motorists, still not convinced, have challenged the entire principle of radar, calling it too experimental to be trusted in the courtroom.

In an earlier day, the law too was skeptical about radar as a scientific principle. But now that skepticism has largely disappeared. As one judge put it:

"X-rays, electrocardiograms, time by watches, identity by fingerprinting, and ballistic evidence are freely accepted in our courts for their general reliability, without the necessity of expert testimony as to the scientific principles underlying them. The use of radar for speed detection may now be said to fall in this category."

In one case an arrested motorist, flagged down by radar, tried a different tack. He claimed he was the victim of an illegal "speed trap." But the evidence showed:

1) that the vehicle containing the radar equipment was plainly marked as a police car; and

2) that the officers manning it were dressed in their regular uniforms.

Unable to see any "trap" in this situation, the court ordered the motorist to pay his fine. The judge felt that a speeder could not complain merely because the police had found a new and better way to catch him.

Panel Begins Study Of State Lawmakers Jobs

By Vern Sanford

AUSTIN

With the next legislative session just two months off, a blue-ribbon speaker's committee has set out to evaluate the jobs of state lawmakers and how they can better perform their duties.

First meeting of the 150-member panel named by House Speaker Gus Mutscher and headed by Waggoner Carr, former attorney general, was held at the capitol last week.

One of the first things Mutscher suggested was a study of the work load heaped on officials who draw only $400 a month base pay. Committee is expected to come up with a recommendation and support for legislators' pay raises.

Mutscher asked the group to give special attention also to legislative facilities, ethics and internal security.

He further suggested a look at steps now taken to assure protection for orderly conduct of the state's business at the capitol and "physical protection" of state officials, employees and the public.

Mutscher said both houses of the legislature will hold a pre-session conference at Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas.

Carr ruled out the study of such matters as annual legislative sessions and abuses by joint conference committees, since the committee was named by the House speaker and was not authorized by the Senate. "Timing of sessions and joint conference committees are matters of concern to both houses," he noted.

Four sub-committees were named and immediately began work. Sub-panels will work in areas of duties, responsibilities and compensation; ethics and standards of conduct; physical facilities and internal security.

BAPTISTS RELEASE SCHOOL

Baptist General Convention here approved the request of Baylor Dental School at Dallas to be released from church control so it could accept government financial aid. Baylor Medical School in Houston was released two years ago, permitting it to seek state funds for enrollment increases.

Convention called on the University of Corpus Christi to repay a $500,000 loan it received from the federal Small Business Administration to repair Hurricane Celia damage and borrow from a non-governmental source.

Delegates adopted resolutions commending national leaders for their spirit of peace to end the Vietnam hostility; urging courts to sue discretion in dealing with each marijuana case on merits; and opposing grants of tax funds to parochial schools.

INSURANCE AD RULES

State Board of Insurance set a November 30 hearing on proposed new rules governing advertisements by health insurance companies.

One rule would require a clear and conspicuous statement in ads of any waiting periods between the date of the policy and the time it actually provides coverage.

Another rule would make the same kind of clear disclosure necessary where coverage is limited for illnesses caused by conditions existing before policy date.

Suggested rules would apply to all newspaper ads, as well as radio-tv, billboards, leaflets, form letters and recurring representations by agents.

Companies would have to maintain a file of ads for inspection by examiners representing the State Insurance Board.

COURTS SPEAK

State Supreme Court set a December 9 hearing on a Houston area welder's accidental "injury" suit which intermediate court held showed only evidence of occupational disease (silieosis).

High Court directed the Bowie County District Court to block an oil pooling arrangment which was ordered by the Railroad Commission for the 80-acre, one-well Simms Field in Bowie County.

Federal District Court here postponed until November 12 a hearing on the San Antonio Conservation Society's suit to bar construction of San Antonio North 281 Expressway.

JUSTICE FUNDS

Texas Criminal Justice Council received final approval of its 1971 block planning grant, totaling $1.2 million.

Money will be spent for statewide planning to improve the criminal justice system. Forty per cent of funds will go to local governmental units.

Texas will receive a block action grant of $19 million for fiscal 1971 from the U. S. Department of Justice to support action projects in the field over the state.

WARNING ISSUED

Parks and Wildlife Department has issued warnings against using as food or water containers any of the one-gallon DDT cans which recently washed up on the beach near Port Isabel.

A Harlingen man reported spotting 25 or 30 of the olive drab cans along a five-mile stretch of beach below Port Mansfield cut. Cans proved to be full of insecticide DDT. Only four actually were recovered.

P & W fears that others may have been taken away by people who might plan to use them for water cans, or that they were washed out to sea and will reappear on other beaches.

"Low Down" FROM THE Congressional Record

By JOE CRUMP

(A Column for Readers Who Haven't Time to Review the Congressional Record Daily)

FRESH LOOK AT THE NATIONAL GUARD

REP. PAUL FINDLEY (Ill.) ". . . The fact is that the National Guard, trained and equipped primarily for military combat, rarely goes to war. Instead it is used mostly for quelling civil disorder, a complex military problem for which it has little specialized training and equipment. . .

"In this era when local police need large-scale professional support often and on short notice, the Congress should reorder the responsibility, training, and equipment of the Guard to fill this need...

"Each new enlisted Guardsman receives. . . only 8 hours of specialized training in how to deal with civil disorders--the only military situation he is likely to encounter while a member of the Guard. Refresher training totaling 16 hours is given annually to all Guardsmen, but. . . requirements state that it must be given during the Months of January through May. The Guard's traditional 2-week summer encampment training period includes no civil disturbance work. Instead, that period focuses exclusively on regular combat training, driving tanks, flying jet fighters, and firing lethal weapons unsuitable for civil disorder control. . .

"Sniper fire during a riot presents a situation totally different from that experienced during military combat. AS THE FIELD MANUEL SAYS, 'The normal reflex action of the well-trained combat soldier to sniper fire. is to respond with overwhelming mass of firepower. In a civil disturbance situation this tactic endangers innocent people more than the snipers.'...

"The purpose of the National Guard when used to control disorders is to contain and control rioters, not to kill them. Automatic combat rifles which fire 850 deadly rounds per minute are about as inappropriate on a college campus or in the streets of American cities as tactical nuclear weapons. THEY OFFER LITTLE PROTECTION TO THE BELEAGUERED GUARDSMAN BECAUSE MOST RIOTERS RIGHTLY ASSUME SUCH WEAPONS WILL NOT BE USED. . .

"Congress should provide the Guard with training and equipment required for riot duty. . .

"Today, I am introducing two amendments to title 32 of the United States Code. . .

"The first amendment requires that in addition to standard combat training each National Guard recruit presently receives, "equal emphasis shall be given to training--for the control of civil disturbances within the United States."

"The second amendment orders the Secretary of Defense to "equip units of the Army National Guard and the Air National Guard as required with specialized equipment and weapons suitable for us to control civil disturbances within the United States. . . ."

A GRASSROOTS COMMENT

If the local police are overwhelmed, the responsibility for law and order passes to the National Guard. Their slogan, "KEEP YOUR GUARD UP," is appropriate. –J.C.

Poage Tells About Unusual Demonstration

Cong. W. R. Poage told about an unusual kind of demonstration at the Capitol just before Congress recessed. "This was an assemblage of thousands of peace officers from all over the country," Poage said in his Oct. 30 newsletter.

"They did not disrupt any traffic. They did not break any windows. They did not burn any buildings. They did not insult any citizens or paint any vile words or signs on the walls," he said. "But they did seek to call attention to the fact that we are not supporting our peace officers as we should."

Poage said the peace officers, many of them city policemen, call attention to the fact that "we cannot expect officers to continue to risk their lives to apprehend wrongdoers if the Courts are going to continue to turn those people loose."

County Agent's Notes ...

Stockmen Invited On Research Visit

By J. D. Moore

Ten stockmen per county from the counties involved in the blackland income growth program are invited to visit Texas A&M University's Animal Science Department on December 7 and 8, to take a look at the program and research in the fields of animal science, as well as visit points of interest on the campus.

The group will leave from the Post Office in Cameron at 8 a.m. on December 7 and return by night on December 8.

No one has been selected to attend this event and stockmen who are interested in taking a look at research are urged to contact the county agent.

This type of program was attended by our interested crops farmers and proved to be very educational. Further information concerning this program is available at the county agent's office.

DAIRYMEN'S SHORTCOURSE

The annual Dairymen's shortcourse will be held at Texas A&M University on November 12 and 13.

Location for the meeting will be in the Ballroom of the Memorial Student Center. A very interesting program is planned. Dairymen are encouraged to attend.

MINERAL PROBLEM

Mineral deficiencies in beef cattle are reported by Dr. R. M. Titsworth, local veterinarian.

Severe cases of phosphorous deficiencies are a result of a lack of phosphorous in grasses which result in stunted growth conditions in calves, breeding problems in beef cows and a real disappointment to stockmen when confronted with this problem.

Steamed bone meal is recommended fed free choice to assure cattle an ample supply of phosphorous. Stockmen are encouraged to discuss this problem with their veterinarian.

FARM NEWS

PEACH BREEDING

New low chilling requirements of peach varieties now being released by peach breeders should make peach production possible deep in South Texas and other southern areas of the country, says Dr. Hollis H. Bowen, a Texas A&M University horticulturist.

1970 AG YEARBOOK

"Contours of Change" is the title of the recently released 1970 Yearbook of Agriculture. It is a book which every American should find both interesting and full of information they can appreciate. Copies are available from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, for $3.50 per copy. Each member of Congress also has a limited number of copies for free distribution.

CUCURBIT PRODUCTION

One of the major reasons cucurbits fail to produce properly is the scarcity of honey bees to take care of the pollination job. This is especially true for backyard plots in the larger cites, where bees lack natural nesting places. The most commonly grown cucurbits are melons, cucumbers and squash.

HORSE SHORT COURSE

The 9th annual Horse Short Course will be held Nov. 20-21 at Texas A&M University. B.F. Yeates, Extension horse specialist, says the program is designed to help both the experienced and novice horseman. Registration will begin at College Station's Ramada Inn at 1 p.m., Nov. 20 with the first scheduled session set for 7 p.m.

4-H CLUB

By Danny Phillips

4-H in Texas is taking on a new look. Plans are underway to develop 4-H Club work in the state into an "in-depth" program.

The new plan has been outlined by Dr. Ed Schlutt, associate state 4-H Club leader, to county Extension Service personnel and adult 4-H leaders at recent gatherings throughout the state.

The new plan has a two-fold objective:

1. To reach a larger number of youth, and

2. To develop meaningful programs.

4-H leaders outlined these basic ingredients of the plan:

1. A dynamic action program at the local club level.

2. Adult leaders working more closely with youth, and county Extension agents working more closely with youth, and county Extension agents working more closely with adult leaders.

3. More involvement of junior or teen leaders.

"The new 4-H program must especially be aimed at the interests of youth -- creation, action, learning and fun," said Schlutt. "New programs must be developed that are meaningful and that meet the present day needs of our youth. They should feel self-satisfaction or self - attainment in 4-H Club work," he added.

Schlutt cited the major needs of 4-H today as the development of adult leaders, special programs for teenagers, a broader scope for 4-H, more recognition at the local club level and a more appealing image of 4-H.

"In 4-H our major concern is the development of boys and girls," contended Schlutt. "Our youth are Texas' most valuable resource, and we must dedicate ourselves to their development and well-being."

"Although 4-H enrollment across Texas has not changed drastically over the past years, there are encouraging signs", said Schlutt. "For instance, adults and teenagers are becoming more interested and involved in 4-H. Since 1960, the number of adult 4-H leaders has increased from 11,000 to 14,000."

"We need to involve more people at all levels in 4-H club work," said Schlutt. "This includes Extension personnel, lay leaders and the 4-H'ers themselves."

The District 4-H Council and a representative group of adult leaders throughout the District will meet December 5 to learn more details of the new plan. It is hoped that as many adult leaders as possible from Milam County will attend.

SCS News

"There was no need for crop fertilization when the blackland prairie soils were first plowed," states Walter Huckabee, soil scientist with the Soil Conservation Service in Temple.

They contained all the organic matter that nature had put into them during many thousands of years. All the organic matter from the prairie grasses that grew on the land went back into it. The soil was mellow and fertile.

When man took over the management of these soils, he grew large acreages of cotton, corn, and other grain crops. Often he burned the cotton stalks and grain straw, and where the land sloped he allowed erosion to carry away much of the black topsoil.

As a result, through almost a century of use, most of these soils lost much of the organic matter they originally contained. Our soils now require careful management and well planned system of farming for the addition of much organic matter to the soil.

The nutrient supply must be balanced by regular additions of necessary fertilizer elements. There is a general shortage of nitrogen, phosphorus, and potash in blackland soils, and many crops are now being grown on a starvation diet.

Nitrogen is needed to: give dark green color to plants, promote leaf, stem and fruit or seed growth, improve quality of leaf crops, produce rapid growth, increase protein content of food and feed crops, and feed soil micro - organisms during their decomposition of low - nitrogen organic materials.

Phosphorus is needed to: stimulate early root formation and growth, give rapid and vigorous start to plants, hasten maturity, stimulate blooming and aids in seed formation, and give winter hardness to fall - seeded grains and hay crops.

Super - phosphate is the principal carrier of available phosphoric acid; this material alone accounting for more than 90 percent of all phosphoric acid guaranteed in fertilizers.

Our soils are far richer in potash than in nitrogen or phosphoric acid. Unfortunately, most of the potash is locked up in the soil in forms that plants cannot readily use.

Potash is needed to: impart vigor and disease resistance to plants, produce strong, stiff stalks, thus reduce lodging, increase plumpness of the grain and seed, help in the formation and transfer of starches, sugars, and oils, and impart winter hardness to legumes and other crops.

Soils should be tested to see how much of each of the fertilizer componants will be needed.

Most of the fertilizers applied in this area are applied in the "fall" time of the year. Weather conditions and timing are the main reasons for application at this time. Your local Soil Conservationist can discuss your fertilizer needs and organic matter maintenance with you.

Many Factors Influence Consumption Of Meat

There are several factors which influence the per capita consumption of meat in the United States but, explains Ed Uvacek, Extension livestock marketing specialist, none is more important than meat production.

How is the per capita consumption of meat figured in the first place? Uvacek says it's simple; namely, meat production plus imports, minus meat exports, divided by the human population.

Since imports are small and exports insignificant, the really important factor then is meat production.

Larger productions of beef, for example, tend to raise the per capita consumption level as long as they are greater than the population growth.

Beef consumption per capita is expected to reach 114 pounds this year compared with 110 pounds last year, notes the specialist.

Income is another factor Uvacek relates as highly important to meat consumption. As per capita income (after taxes) rises, meat consumption usually increases, he says. This relationship is much more pronounced for certain cuts such as steaks and roasts and less evident for items like bacon and ham.

Price has a major influence on meat consumption levels and the usual pattern -- as prices rise -- meat consumption moves lower. Consumption of specific meat cuts, however, varies considerably in their reaction to price changes, explains Uvacek.

Research indicates that the consumer's occupation also affects consumption habits. Laborers, for example, tend to eat more meat than white-collar workers.

Where one lives also influences the types of meat and the amount consumed, notes Uvacek.

City dwellers, in general, eat more meat than rural people. Regional differences in meat consumption habits are real. A person who grew up in the North East U.S. is likely to consume more lamb and heavier beef than is a native Texan, says Uvacek.

Family size and its composition may also play a role in meat consumption. In general, explains the specialist, teenagers in a family usually eat more meat while older people consume very little. As a rule, the per capita consumption of meat decreases as family size increases, says Uvacek.

Race, religion and nationality are cited as greatly affecting the meat consumption habits of people. The season of the year also comes in for consideration and is most important when specific cuts of meat are considered.

The spring and summer "cook out" season brings much stronger demands for hamburgers, steaks and hot dogs while roasts and stews are winter-time favorites.

And finally, says Uvacek, meat consumption is a rather complicated process that yeilds a single simple figure but one that had best not be misinterpreted.

ASCS NEWS

By Alva E. Sanders

It is suggested that now is a good time for farmers to bring up to date farm records which are maintained in their County ASCS Office.

Records are kept on farms participating in government programs administered by ASCS. A farmer who was in any program in 1970 and who has bought, sold, leased, rented, or otherwise acquired or disposed of farmland should visit his County ASCS Office to report the transactions.

Previous farm legislation is expiring and Congress is expected to take up proposed new farm legislation when it reconvenes this month. Whatever farm programs are passed, farmers will want to be sure their farm records are accurate and complete when the programs go into effect.

County ASCS Offices are required to keep records on acreage of all farms where owners or operators participate in any ASCS - administered program. These include programs for feed grain, wheat, cotton, and peanuts in years when proportionate shares are in effect. In addition, ASCS - administered farm programs including price - support on such commodities as honey.

If a farm is constituted differently now than it was when the farmer began program participation, and if he hasn't yet reported the change, he should do so as soon as possible. Also, if a farm has changed owners or operators in that period, a report should be made to the County ASCS Office.

Changes in the operations of farms need be reported only by farmers participating in one or more farm programs administered by ASCS.

Higher prices for consumer services, apparel, and houses accounted for almost all of the 0.4 percent increase in the Consumer Price Index for September.

The U. S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that the CPI was 5.6 percent above a year ago.

Food prices, which declined slightly in August, rose 0.4 percent and prices of nonfood commodities rose at a faster pace.

Prices of new cars declined much less than is normal for this time of year. Used car prices dropped. Gasoline prices increased, apparel prices were up substantially, and prices of houses rose significantly for the second month in a row.

Charges for consumer prices advanced 0.6 percent - the same as August. Prices for transportation services were sharply higher due to increased automobile insurance rates and airplane, train and local transit fares.

Increases in mortgage interest costs. prices of home maintenance and repair services, and property taxes were factors in the increase in the cost of household services.

Charges for medical care and other services continued to rise.

About 70,000 workers will receive cost - of - living wage increases based on the CPI for

Nutrition Jargon

Just what do the terms "adequate nutrition," "malnutrition" and "hunger" really mean? "Adequate nutrition" is the body's use of essential nutrients in the amounts and proportions necessary for optimum health throughout life. "Malnutrition" encompasses undernutrition, overnutrition and nutrient imbalance. Health and physiological functions are impaired by undernutrition or insufficient intake of one or more essential nutrients and overnutrition or excessive consumption of one or more essential nutrients. Nutrient imbalance can be a result of either under- or overnutrition. "Hunger" is synonymous with undernutrition, and the advanced form is starvation which leads to wasting of body tissues and eventually death.

A weekly public service feature from the Texas State Department of Health

Accent on Health

J.E. PEAVY, M.D.,
Commissioner of Health

A major effort toward drug abuse education and prevention has been launched by the Texas State Department of Health.

The Department's Division of Food and Drugs and Public Health Education Division are cooperating in the development of new programs and services for the citizens of Texas.

The State Health Department is planning a series of 10 regional seminars on drug abuse and its community health implications. The first one is scheduled November 17 in State Health Department Region 7, headquartered in Tyler. Health professionals and community officials from the 36-county East Texas region will be eligible to attend the one-day seminar in the auditorium of the East Texas TV Hospital Annex.

The seminar will focus on the health aspects of drug abuse, detail current programs underway, and examine possible future directions a local and state campaign against drug abuse may take. The course content will include a history of drug traffic, the problem today, current state attack, and how communities can be organized. State Health Commissioner Dr. James E. Peavy will keynote the program.

The faculty will include a nationally - known drug abuse expert, Dr. Joe Schoolar of the Texas Research Institute, a unit of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation. The health aspects of drug use and abuse, and current research, will be emphasized.

The State Health Department also is deeply involved in other drug abuse programs. Department personnel, working in the Governor's Task Force on Drug Abuse, are involved in the planning and development of a coordinated statewide, inter - agency attack on drug problems. They will be participants on Interagency Community Assistance Teams.

With the assistance of KUHT and the University of Houston, the State Health Department has produced a one-hour film that will be released to statewide television this fall. The film vividly portrays the scope of the problem in Texas and the reaction of parents and students to the use, misuse and abuse of legal and illegal drugs.

Purpose of the film is to stimulate communities and organizations to action.

Commission Will Study Legislature

AUSTIN

Speaker Gus Mutscher has challenged his select Committee of 100 to make an in depth study of the Texas Legislature with particular emphasis on the workings of the House and to return a report that will be a "landmark in legislative modernization."

Mutscher said he felt "this important task can best be undertaken by what we'd call an 'outside group' of interested and concerned Texans rather than by a committee of legislators, in order that we may have the benefit of a fresher, more objective review of what we have and what is needed."

The Speaker's challenge was made at the organizational meeting of the Committee of 100 to Study the Legislator's Duties, Responsibilities, Compensation and Ethics held October 29 in Austin.

Chairman of the blue ribbon group is former Atty. Gen. Waggoner Carr. Rep. R. H. (Dick) Cory of Victoria is vice chairman.

Carr endorsed Mutscher's four - point program of study and emphasized that the committee "with nothing to gain but good government can uniquely assist the members of the House in such internal and individual matters as efficiency, standards of conduct, compensation and duties."

The committee is scheduled to complete its studies and make recommendations to the 62nd Legislature when it convenes next January.

Mutscher called for four areas of study:

--The duties, responsibilities and compensation of legislators.

--The standards of conduct of state representatives.

--The facilities available to aid the legislative process

--The internal security measures necessary for the capitol complex.

New Wallpaper Is Easy To Clean

By Christine Laws

Nope, not even children with crayons and dirty hands can damper the fashionable designs of the new durable, washable, scrubbable wallpapers.

Actually, the new wallpaper isn't necessarily paper at all. It may be a vinyl fabric, or if it is paper, it is commonly treated with a vinyl coating. The vinyl fabrics and coating convert a once onerous chore into a quick and easy task of wiping off most any type of soil -- from fingerprints to kitchen grease splatters.

The designs of the vinyl wallpapers come in many styles. Some of the papers have flocked patterns, giving a velvet appearance. Some have the new "wet look" that resembles patent leather.

The patterns, which range from formal French to the very informal contemporary, includes stripes, stylized flowers, paisleys or even murals that look like hand painted walls.

The new wallpapers are pre-pasted, so decorating with them doesn't require professional help. Simply wet the paper and stick it to the wall. It's particularly easy if doing only a small area or one wall.

STORING VEGETABLES

Any homemaker can preserve the appetizing goodness of fresh vegetables by properly storing them. Original quality, storage temperature, humidity and care in handling are important factors that determine effective storing. For example, pinching and rough handling will damage tomatoes.

Fresh vegetables should be bought on the basis of eating quality, food value, intended use and cost. Varieties of vegetables are also important for satisfying individual tastes. For instance, varieties differ in the pungency of onions or peppers and in the quality of sweet corn or snap beans.

Most fresh vegetables keep best in the refrigerator. But prolonged chilling below 50 degrees will injure many warm season vegetables such as cucumbers, egg plant, okra and sweet peppers.

Many fresh vegetables, packaged in ventilated film bags, can be refrigerated in such bags to help reduce moisture loss.

Cleaning and chilling vegetables makes them crisp and ready for quick use. So before storing in the refrigerator, all vegetables should be washed in cool water. Pre-packaged vegetables may be washed just before cooking.

When washing green leafy vegetables, use plenty of water. Agitate the leaves under water then lift the greens out as grit settles to the bottom of the sink or pan. Drain thoroughly and quickly, then shake to remove excess moisture.

A vegetable crisper will cut down on moisture loss if it is at least two-thirds filled. If not, place vegetables in plastic bags before storing in the crisper.

Special Meeting Called To Organize Boy Scout Troops

There will be a meeting at Progressive Baptist Church at 6 p.m. Monday, November 9, to organize Cub Scouting and Boy Scouting.

Parents of boys age 8 to 18 are urged to attend the meeting with their sons.

Ron Derry, Tejas District Scout Executive, said "Unfortunately this past week there was an incident in which Negro boys were turned away from joining a Scout unit in Cameron.

"These boys can have an equal opportunity to benefit from the Scouting program if sufficient people appear at this called meeting to enable organization of Scout units for the boys," Derry said.

Fast, Hot and Salty

Hot seawater moving at high velocities presents one of the most severe corrosion tests for shipboard materials. However, copper-nickel piping systems for shipboard cooling last the 20-to 25-year life of a ship.

PERSONALS—

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Obermiller attended the Lawrence Welk show at the Coliseum in Houston, Thursday, Oct. 29. They were guests of their daughter, Mrs. Ilynn Fuchs and family. Rebecca, Laura, and Kenneth Fuchs returned to Cameron to attend a birthday dinner honoring their paternal grandfather, Mr. Leo Fuchs on Saturday night.

Canned Stew Creates Meal Masterpiece

A good fall meal should fill you up, warm you up, and taste good, too. Often, though, you don't have time to sit down and plan these memorable meals, let alone prepare them.

It's times like these when it's nice to have a can of stew around the house. Take a can of stew, add a touch of wine, a pinch of herbs and you've a culinary masterpiece in short order.

Here we show canned chicken stew spiced with pungent clove, accompanied by Pecan Squash.

Like the stew, this squash takes only minutes to prepare. Just combine frozen squash with chopped pecans and brown sugar and heat. Pour into individual dishes, top with miniature marshmallows, and brown under the broiler.

Complete this memorable meal with a dessert of fresh fruit and plenty of milk and coffee.

PUNGENT CHICKEN STEW

1 can (19 ounces) chicken stew
Generous dash ground cloves

In saucepan, combine stew and cloves. Heat; stir now and then. Makes 2 to 3 servings.

PECAN SQUASH

1 package (12 ounces) frozen cooked squash
¼ cup chopped pecans
Generous dash ground nutmeg
¾ cup miniature marshmallows

Prepare squash as directed on package adding pecans and nutmeg. Place squash in 3 individual baking dishes (6-ounce size); top with marshmallows. Broil 4 inches from heat until browned. Makes 3 servings.

Waco Symphony Opens With Beethoven Concert

The Waco Symphony Orchestra will open its season Monday, Nov. 9, with an all-Beethoven concert in Waco Hall for which pianist Gary Graffman will be the guest artist.

He and the orchestra, conducted by Daniel Sternberg, will play Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 4. The orchestra will also play his Overture to Coriolanus and Symphony No. 3 (Eroica).

The American-born Graffman was recently called by Time Magazine "the top American pianist in his age group."

In the 21 years of his professional career, he has won many laurels but the one most prized was the one that first established him as a professional worth of notice, the famed Leventritt Award in New York City which carries with it an appearance with the New York Philharmonic.

Other artists for the Waco Symphony season are violinist James Oliver Buswell IV on Jan. 25 and Metropolitan Opera soprano Gabriella Tucci on March 1.

Season tickets, at $12.50 and $10 on the main floor of Waco Hall, $10 for first balcony and $5 for second balcony, may be ordered from the Waco Symphony Association, P.O. Box 62, Waco. Tickets for the single concert, if any remain, will not be sold until the day of the concert. They will be available then only at the box office in Waco Hall.

Teen Diet

In the active world of teenagers adequate diets often are forgotten. Six out of ten teenage girls and four out of ten teenage boys have poor diets because of their eating habits. Among the reasons for these improper diets are: skipping breakfast, eating nutritionally poor snacks, believing that eating makes one fat and considering outside activities more important than eating.

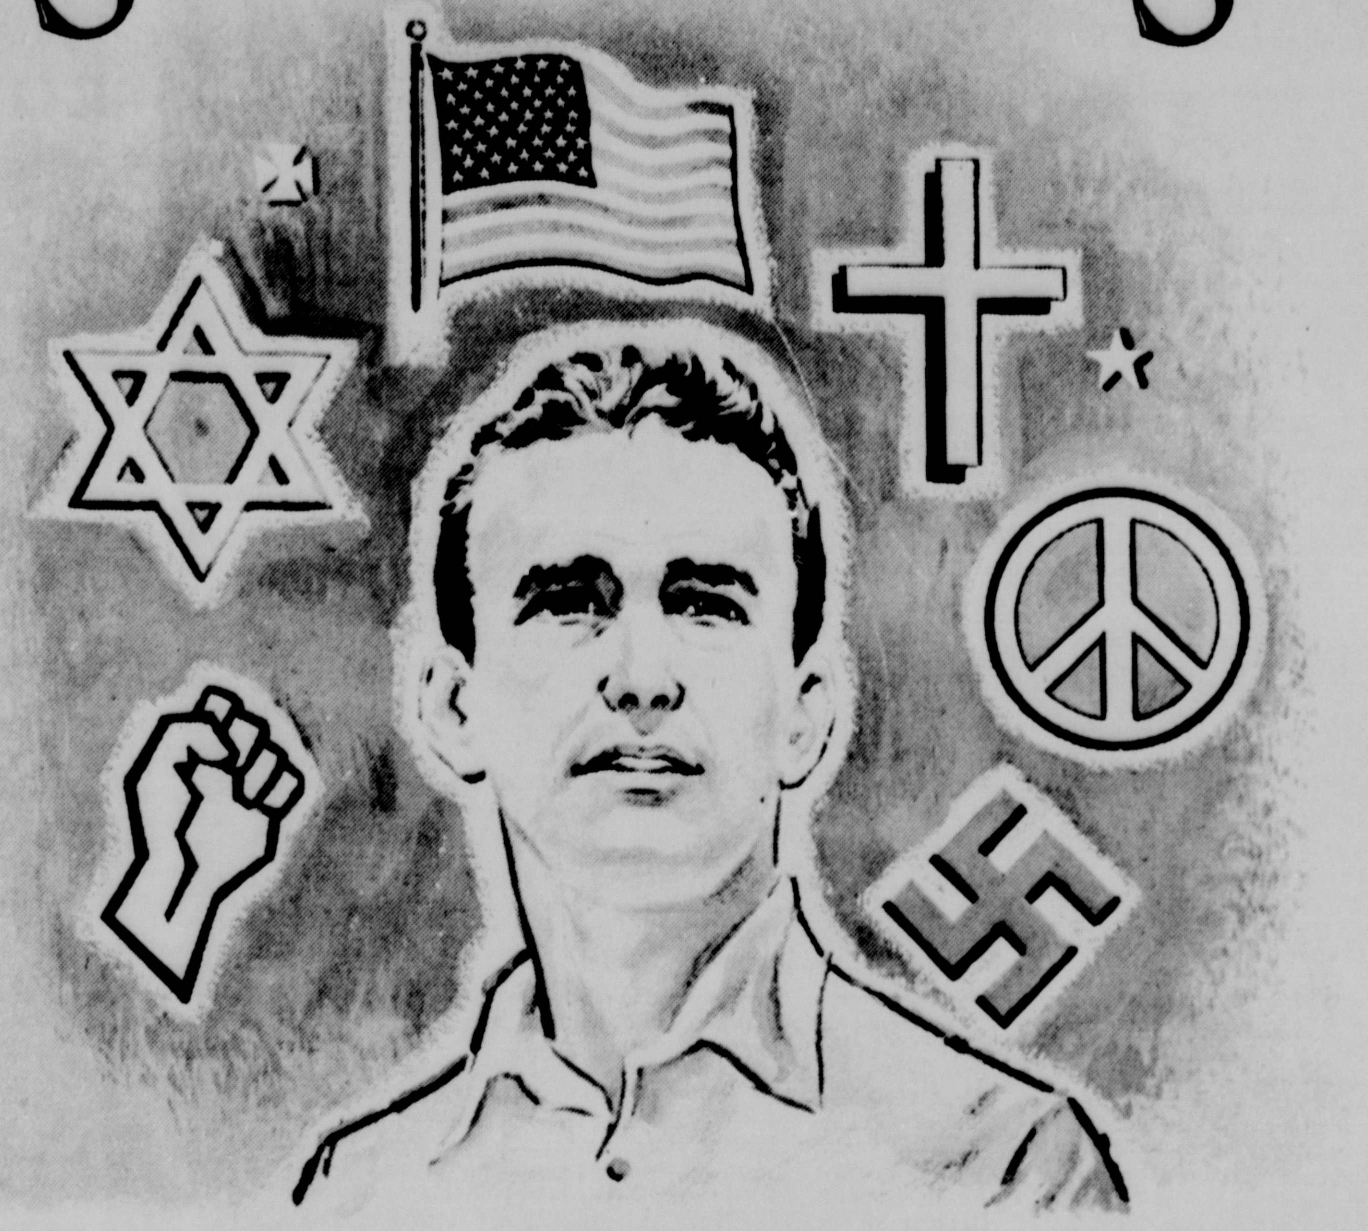
SYMBOLS



...the world is full of them. National symbols, political symbols, religious symbols for most every type, race, creed, organization or business. It's getting so that we automatically judge a person by the symbol he wears. "See that man with the Star of David? He's a Jew. The one with the Cross is a Christian. Look at that guy wearing flowers, ...he's a hippie. Those with clinched fists are black power advocates. Donkeys are for Democrats, elephants for Republicans."

Everyone knows that. Yes, but what if the symbols were to disappear? Ah, there's the rub. Then, just how could we know what a person really is? Even more important, would we know?

Check your life today...right now. Are you depending on symbols to identify you, to get you through? Do your actions read well? For sake of the record, just what manner of man are you? In the final analysis, only your actions, your life will tell. Attend church this week. It'll make a big difference.

The peach trees on Peach Tree Street, that famous thoroughfare in Atlanta (Ga.) cough a little bit in mid-day traffic.

On a brief trip to a press meeting there last week, 111 sensed, like many others, no doubt, that urban sprawl and congestion affect the peach blossoms in spring.

This was late October, however, and traffic moved slowly even before the rush hour load hit its peak.

Hearing a comment on the heavy run of cars, taxis and buses, an Atlantan said wryly; "We call the downtown area the 'parking lot' when things really are congested."

Atlanta must have been one of the first cities in the nation to grasp the value of foilage and ecore on main thoroughfares. Peach Tree Street is possibly one of the most beautiful sights in any metropolitan city. Trees were there, presumably, when the Yankees went through.

Now every city wants trees, shrubs, a little grass in the downtowns to break the monotony of asphalt and concrete, which now is becoming a component of the high rise office towers and apartments.

Atlanta is losing some of its old golf courses to housing kevelopments, one among numerous older cities giving up natural beauty for rows of new addresses.

Atlantans would be among leaders, like San Franciscans, who resent this infringement on tradition. People a few years ago in San Franciso rose up and stopped construction of a freeway along the Bay which would have obstructed a view they so cherish.

As we were saying, the peach trees sputter before they blossom now, the narrow streets having little room to yield to dense, two-way traffic. There's no more carbon in the air than most downtowns, but not many have miles of fruit blossoms to look upon in April.

Maybe it doesn't affect this arborial tradition now, but it is a problem which Atlantans sometime consider.

Things like congestion and smog and auto pollution shouldn't happen to people. Or peach blossoms. It is sad to contemplate even when miles of flowering buds respond to the wonder of life's renewal.

YOE-ELGIN TILT IS LAST HOME GAME

The Elgin Wildcats will challenge the Yoemen 8 p.m. Friday in the last 20AA homegame in Cameron.

A number of Cameron linemen have been on the sick list as the Wildcats seek to improve their 1-2 district record and the Yoemen seek to improve their 2-1 record, second behind undefeated Georgetown and Round Rock, who play Friday night.

If Cameron defeats Elgin and Round Rock defeats Georgetown, the final Yoe-Round Rock game could throw 20AA into a three-way tie with a Yoeman win both against Elgin and Round Rock.

Elgin has lost already to Georgetown, Round Rock and earlier to non-district competitors Giddings, Bastrop and Luling.

Coach Hal Stanislaw says Yoe linemen Bill Grey, Clint Schofield, Jack Raymond and Fritz have been sick or injured, missing practices this week.

He expects Ed Whitley and Ernie De La Rosa to return for some action Friday night. He says Joe Lewis may start at tight end and Lester Hays may see action at defensive end.

Starting backfield will probably be Richard Cummings at quarterback, Robert Brashear at lefthalf, Whitley if well at fullback and De La Rosa if well at righthalf.

Elgin has 225-pound Mike Saxon anchoring the line and halfback Cathy providing running sparks. He rates the Wildcats a "better than verage" passing team.

It is the last homegame for the 1970 Yoemen, who travel to Round Rock for what could be a 20AA "decision maker" if they win both games.

Stanislaw says Elgin is a quick ballclub and expects the Wildcats to be "up" for the Cameron game.

City Police Report Shooting Accident

City police reported a fairly quiet weekend with only one complaint called in on Halloween night, and an accidental shooting Saturday night.

Police said a Cameron juvenile came to the station and made a voluntary statement about the shooting incident. According to his statement, he and several other youths were riding in a car and stopped at Ritter's Service Station to fix a flat about 8:30 Saturday night.

The youth told police he was handing the pistol to another youth to look at when it accidentally fired. The bullet struck Freddie Lee Townsend, of Cameron, in the left shoulder.

Townsend was treated at a Temple hospital and released Sunday.

The juvenile was charged with simple assault in Justice of the Peace Jess Brock's Court and paid a fine.

Supt., Judge Explain Voting Place Change

Reasons for changing the voting place for Precinct 2 were explained by County Judge O. B. Harden and School Supt. D. R. Dodson in answer to Herald inquiry Tuesday.

The voting place was moved from the Yoe High School gym to 1205 North Central St., in the former Wendel Cryer house.

Supt. Dodson told The Herald that he had asked Judge Harden to change the voting place two years ago, after the 1968 general election. Dodson said having the gym tied up all day "put the school in a bind" because so many children were using the gym for classes.

He said enrollment increases and combining the public schools increased use of the gym. Six classes are scheduled for activities in the gym each day, he added.

Judge Harden said the County Commissioners had discussed the superintendent's request in 1968, but could not find a suitable alternative.

The Texas Election Code calls for elections to be held in a school house, fire station or other public building within the limits of the precinct. If no public building is available the Election Code allows renting or constructing a voting house.

"The school property is the only public building in Precinct 2," Harden said. He said he asked Supt. Dodson if another building at the school was available for use as a voting place, but Dodson suggested no alternatives.

Commissioners meeting in a called session last Friday decided to rent the Cryer residence for the day because it was the closest available location to the former polling place.

Harden said County Atty. John B. Henderson Jr. reviewed the Texas Election Code and said the voting place change was within the law.

Judge Harden said every effort had been made to publicize the change through the newspaper and radio. "We also contacted local churches asking them to announce the change, and we notified Republican and Democratic officials," he said.

He also noted that signs had been placed on 12th Street directing voters to the temporary Pct. 2 voting location.

PTA Program Will Feature Special Music At Ben Milam Tonight

A special program of music is planned for Cameron PTA Meeting Thursday (tonight) at 7:30 p.m. in Ben Milam Cafetorium. Mrs. Thomas Dusek, school music teacher, will present some of her students in the special program.

"Usually when we hear the words 'student involvement,' we think of riots and protests," said Mrs. Louis Hollas, PTA president, "but not so in the Cameron Schools."

"The students spend their time learning the basic 3 R's and other subjects that make for a well-rounded student. Music is one way we have of expressing our feelings and others enjoy the results," she added.

"Come and see a demonstration Thursday night that we can all be proud to say, 'this is what the Cameron Schools represent.' "

City OKs Pay Raise, PD Chief

City employees will receive a five percent salary increase following action by the City Council at a regular meeting Tuesday. Council also voted to name Felipe Martinez Chief of Police.

The salary increase will be retroactive to October 1, the start of the city's fiscal year. Mayor E. A. Perrin, in recommending the salary raise, said increased tax assessments added more funds to the city budget than had been anticipated earlier.

Martinez has been serving as acting chief of police since former Chief John Shearin resigned in mid - September to accept a post at Georgetown.

The motion to appoint the new chief came immediately after Mayor Perrin's recommendation, and the vote was unanimous. Mayor Perrin told Councilmen that he had only good reports on Martinez' work as acting chief.

In other business, Council reviewed a report from the street committee, and voted to have Streets Supt. Hale and the committee conduct a survey of several streets on Saturday.

SEN. TOWER ENDORSES UR PROJECT

U. S. Sen. John Tower has formally endorsed Cameron's urban renewal project, which is awaiting final approval by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) in Washington.

In a letter to George Romney, Secretary of HUD, Sen. Tower said he was formally endorsing Cameron's application for an urban renewal project "as a much needed program for the future growth and economic health of the city."

Tower noted that the application has been approved at the Regional level and is in Washington at this time.

The letter continued, "As Ranking Minority member of the Senate Housing Subcommittee, I well realize the budgetary limitations that you face in the Urban Renewal field, in view of the many applications that are sent into Washington.

"The city officials and I will cooperate in any way that you advise in regard to making the Cameron application as competitive with other applications as possible, to the end that the project be in an optimum postion for final approval and funding," Sen. Tower concluded.

A CHECK FOR MORE THAN $181,000 changed hands Friday at the Milam County Tax Office as Alcoa's Rockdale Works made its ad valorem tax payment on all updated plant facilities as of January 1, 1970. The payment, the highest county-state ad valorem paid to date by Rockdale Works, was made by Works Manager H. F. Chrisco (left), and Accounting Manager J. R. Burruss, to Valter White (center), Milam County Assessor - Collector. The almost constant growth at Rockdale Works in its near 20 year history has pumped millions of tax dollars into Texas and local economies.

Grass Roots Voting.....

An approximate two-million votes carried Democrats Lloyd Bentsen and Gov. Preston Smith past Republican challenges Tuesday, leading a Democratic majority back to Austin.

Lt.-Gov. Ben Barnes and five other Democratic candidates tripled or even quadrupled votes on little known GOP state challengers in expected easy wins.

Trends across the nation show Democratic wins in the state houses while Republicans won two senatorial seats and lost about 10 seats in the House, not unusual for off-year Congressional elections for the party in power.

Observers note the Democratic tradition gave an early lead to both the Governor's and Mr. Bentsen's contests with Paul Eggers and George Bush.

Economics seemed the issue in many states while law and order, both President Nixon and Vice President Agnew's rallying point, found support in a few key states, namely in New York, where Conservative Party James Buckley with 39 percent of the vote defeated both the Democrat and Republican.

In California, Sen. George Murphy was defeated by young Cong. Tunny while Governor Reagan defeated Democrat Jesse Unruh. Implications were not clear since a conservative was re-elected governor and a liberal was elected, defeating the conservative senator.

But losses in gubernatorial races in a number of states, neighboring Oklahoma for example, shifted strength back to Democrats, portending new bases for grass roots building for 1972.

The grass roots Democratic tradition in Texas kept back powerful efforts by Bush and Eggers. It appeared at press-time the percentage of vote was Democrats 54 percent, Republicans 46 percent.

Concern among Democrats a few weeks ago brought appeals for greater vote turnouts as it appeared possible less than 40 percent of the four million electorate might elect a senator and governor.

Question was whether the major effort for GOP wins in 16 key states was worth the exposure of President Nixon and Vice President Agnew to such a mixed voter reaction.

Economics, which was pushed as a Democrat issue versus law and order, generally identified with GOP campaigning, was its counter. In Midwest voting, like Indiana, industrial layoffs were making a difference in voting while non-metro areas were going GOP. The senatorial race there may not be officially counted for a week.

Conservative views did gain among Democratic winners, such as conservative Democrat Bentsen in Texas. The White House would consider his election an idealogical plus for Administration efforts in the Senate, most of last year met with liberal opposition.

With Texas voting in an off-year election, Texans voted their traditions, the non-metro vote counting heavily when two-party voting is more common in Texas cities.

It would take additional analysis to see what new direction, if any, the Tuesday electorate took. It would appear more Democratic at state level and mixed in the Congress.

"OKAY, NOW LET'S WORK TOGETHER FOR TEXAS"

OLD PHILOSOPHER

Dear editar:

I've heard it said that people who don't know history are doomed to repeat it, and probably the same applies to Algebra or Chemestry or anything else a student fails in, but in the larger meaning of the saying I ran across an item in a newspaper last night that bears it out.

According to it, the airlines in the U. S. lost 58 million dollars in the first half of this year. They blame it on rising operating costs and falling numbers of passengers. Too many empty seats, they said.

Don't you see how history is repeating itself? That was exactly the same story of the passenger trains.

Some people said passenger trains disappeared because the railroads discouraged train travel by giving lousy service and thinking up ways to make it inconvenient, while the railroads said it was because they were losing money.

Now I don't know anything about air travel, but I know a few people who do and they say once you get on a plane you can get where your're going in a satisfactorily short time, if the hijackers took some other plane, but lots of time you have to sit around the airport for an hour or so before taking off, after spending an hour getting there, and sometimes you have to circle around your destination an hour or so waiting for other planes to land, and when you do finally come down you have to wait a long while to get your luggage, and sometimes you don't get it at all if it went to Omaha when you were going to Cincinnati.

You can see where this is leading. Gradually the airlines will cut down on their passenger service, passengers will find the service isn't worth the trouble, and everybody will have to travel by car or stay at home.

If confined at home, with television what it is, a large segment of the population will go stark raving mad..

Clearly the airlines ought to take a refresher course in history.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Radar Vs. Motorist

Citizen Haines, given a ticket for speeding, determined to fight his case in court. At the hearing, officers relied on radar evidence to prove the charge against him. According to radar, Haines had indeed been travelling well over the speed limit.

But the police overlooked one thing. They failed to produce evidence that their radar equipment was in good working order on the day Haines was arrested. Result: he won an acquittal.

This case illustrates how the law, while accepting the benefits of technical progress, is also concerned with fair play for the individual. Almost everywhere, in traffic cases, courts will insist on evidence that the radar equipment was working properly when it was put to use.

Today it is standard practice for such equipment to be checked regularly. Usually this is done by tuning forks or by clocked road tests. Even so, some motorists, still not convinced, have challenged the entire principle of radar, calling it too experimental to be trusted in the courtroom.

In an earlier day, the law too was skeptical about radar as a scientific principle. But now that skepticism has largely disappeared. As one judge put it:

"X-rays, electrocardiograms, time by watches, identity by fingerprinting, and ballistic evidence are freely accepted in our courts for their general reliability, without the necessity of expert testimony as to the scientific principles underlying them. The use of radar for speed detection may now be said to fall in this category."

In one case an arrested motorist, flagged down by radar, tried a different tack. He claimed he was the victim of an illegal "speed trap." But the evidence showed:

1) that the vehicle containing the radar equipment was plainly marked as a police car; and

2) that the officers manning it were dressed in their regular uniforms.

Unable to see any "trap" in this situation, the court ordered the motorist to pay his fine. The judge felt that a speeder could not complain merely because the police had found a new and better way to catch him.

Panel Begins Study Of State Lawmakers Jobs

By Vern Sanford

AUSTIN

With the next legislative session just two months off, a blue-ribbon speaker's committee has set out to evaluate the jobs of state lawmakers and how they can better perform their duties.

First meeting of the 150-member panel named by House Speaker Gus Mutscher and headed by Waggoner Carr, former attorney general, was held at the capitol last week.

One of the first things Mutscher suggested was a study of the work load heaped on officials who draw only $400 a month base pay. Committee is expected to come up with a recommendation and support for legislators' pay raises.

Mutscher asked the group to give special attention also to legislative facilities, ethics and internal security.

He further suggested a look at steps now taken to assure protection for orderly conduct of the state's business at the capitol and "physical protection" of state officials, employees and the public.

Mutscher said both houses of the legislature will hold a pre-session conference at Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas.

Carr ruled out the study of such matters as annual legislative sessions and abuses by joint conference committees, since the committee was named by the House speaker and was not authorized by the Senate. "Timing of sessions and joint conference committees are matters of concern to both houses," he noted.

Four sub-committees were named and immediately began work. Sub-panels will work in areas of duties, responsibilities and compensation; ethics and standards of conduct; physical facilities and internal security.

BAPTISTS RELEASE SCHOOL

Baptist General Convention here approved the request of Baylor Dental School at Dallas to be released from church control so it could accept government financial aid. Baylor Medical School in Houston was released two years ago, permitting it to seek state funds for enrollment increases.

Convention called on the University of Corpus Christi to repay a $500,000 loan it received from the federal Small Business Administration to repair Hurricane Celia damage and borrow from a non-governmental source.

Delegates adopted resolutions commending national leaders for their spirit of peace to end the Vietnam hostility; urging courts to sue discretion in dealing with each marijuana case on merits; and opposing grants of tax funds to parochial schools.

INSURANCE AD RULES

State Board of Insurance set a November 30 hearing on proposed new rules governing advertisements by health insurance companies.

One rule would require a clear and conspicuous statement in ads of any waiting periods between the date of the policy and the time it actually provides coverage.

Another rule would make the same kind of clear disclosure necessary where coverage is limited for illnesses caused by conditions existing before policy date.

Suggested rules would apply to all newspaper ads, as well as radio-tv, billboards, leaflets, form letters and recurring representations by agents.

Companies would have to maintain a file of ads for inspection by examiners representing the State Insurance Board.

COURTS SPEAK

State Supreme Court set a December 9 hearing on a Houston area welder's accidental "injury" suit which intermediate court held showed only evidence of occupational disease (sillieosis).

High Court directed the Bowie County District Court to block an oil pooling arrangment which was ordered by the Railroad Commission for the 80-acre, one-well Simms Field in Bowie County.

Federal District Court here postponed until November 12 a hearing on the San Antonio Conservation Society's suit to bar construction of San Antonio North 281 Expressway.

JUSTICE FUNDS

Texas Criminal Justice Council received final approval of its 1971 block planning grant, totaling $1.2 million.

Money will be spent for statewide planning to improve the criminal justice system. Forty per cent of funds will go to local governmental units.

Texas will receive a block action grant of $19 million for fiscal 1971 from the U. S. Department of Justice to support action projects in the field over the state.

WARNING ISSUED

Parks and Wildlife Department has issued warnings against using as food or water containers any of the one-gallon DDT cans which recently washed up on the beach near Port Isabel.

A Harlingen man reported spotting 25 or 30 of the olive drab cans along a five-mile stretch of beach below Port Mansfield cut. Cans proved to be full of insecticide DDT. Only four actually were recovered.

P & W fears that others may have been taken away by people who might plan to use them for water cans, or that they were washed out to sea and will reappear on other beaches.

"Low Down" FROM THE Congressional Record

By JOE CRUMP

(A Column for Readers Who Haven't Time to Review the Congressional Record Daily)

FRESH LOOK AT THE NATIONAL GUARD

REP. PAUL FINDLEY (Ill.) ". . . The fact is that the National Guard, trained and equipped primarily for military combat, rarely goes to war. Instead it is used mostly for quelling civil disorder, a complex military problem for which it has little specialized training and equipment. . .

"In this era when local police need large-scale professional support often and on short notice, the Congress should reorder the responsibility, training, and equipment of the Guard to fill this need...

"Each new enlisted Guardsman receives. . . only 8 hours of specialized training in how to deal with civil disorders--the only military situation he is likely to encounter while a member of the Guard. Refresher training totaling 16 hours is given annually to all Guardsmen, but. . . requirements state that it must be given during the Months of January through May. The Guard's traditional 2-week summer encampment training period includes no civil disturbance work. Instead, that period focuses exclusively on regular combat training, driving tanks, flying jet fighters, and firing lethal weapons unsuitable for civil disorder control. . .

"Sniper fire during a riot presents a situation totally different from that experienced during military combat. AS THE FIELD MANUEL SAYS, 'The normal reflex action of the well-trained combat soldier to sniper fire is to respond with overwhelming mass of firepower. In a civil disturbance situation this tactic endangers innocent people more than the snipers.'...

"The purpose of the National Guard when used to control disorders is to contain and control rioters, not to kill them. Automatic combat rifles which fire 850 deadly rounds per minute are about as inappropriate on a college campus or in the streets of American cities as tactical nuclear weapons. THEY OFFER LITTLE PROTECTION TO THE BELEAGUERED GUARDSMAN BECAUSE MOST RIOTERS RIGHTLY ASSUME SUCH WEAPONS WILL NOT BE USED. . .

"Congress should provide the Guard with training and equipment required for riot duty. . .

"Today, I am introducing two amendments to title 32 of the United States Code. . .

"The first amendment requires that in addition to standard combat training each National Guard recruit presently receives, "equal emphasis shall be given to training--for the control of civil disturbances within the United States."

"The second amendment orders the Secretary of Defense to "equip units of the Army National Guard and the Air National Guard as required with specialized equipment and weapons suitable for us to control civil disturbances within the United States. . . ."

A GRASSROOTS COMMENT

If the local police are overwhelmed, the responsibility for law and order passes to the National Guard. Their slogan, "KEEP YOUR GUARD UP," is appropriate. -J.C.

Poage Tells About Unusual Demonstration

Cong. W. R. Poage told about an unusual kind of demonstration at the Capitol just before Congress recessed. "This was an assemblage of thousands of peace officers from all over the country," Poage said in his Oct. 30 newsletter.

"They did not disrupt any traffic. They did not break any windows. They did not burn any buildings. They did not insult any citizens or paint any vile words or signs on the walls," he said. "But they did seek to call attention to the fact that we are not supporting our peace officers as we should."

Poage said the peace officers, many of them city policemen, call attention to the fact that "we cannot expect officers to continue to risk their lives to apprehend wrongdoers if the Courts are going to continue to turn those people loose."

County Agent's Notes ...

Stockmen Invited On Research Visit

By J. D. Moore

Ten stockmen per county from the counties involved in the blackland income growth program are invited to visit Texas A&M University's Animal Science Department on December 7 and 8, to take a look at the program and research in the fields of animal science, as well as visit points of interest on the campus.

The group will leave from the Post Office in Cameron at 8 a.m. on December 7 and return by night on December 8.

No one has been selected to attend this event and stockmen who are interested in taking a look at research are urged to contact the county agent.

This type of program was attended by our interested crops farmers and proved to be very educational. Further information concerning this program is available at the county agent's office.

DAIRYMEN'S SHORTCOURSE

The annual Dairymen's shortcourse will be held at Texas A&M University on November 12 and 13.

Location for the meeting will be in the Ballroom of the Memorial Student Center. A very interesting program is planned. Dairymen are encouraged to attend.

MINERAL PROBLEM

Mineral deficiencies in beef cattle are reported by Dr. R. M. Titsworth, local veterinarian.

Severe cases of phosphorous deficiencies are a result of a lack of phosphorous in grasses which result in stunted growth conditions in calves, breeding problems in beef cows and a real disappointment to stockmen when confronted with this problem.

Steamed bone meal is recommended fed free choice to assure cattle an ample supply of phosphorous. Stockmen are encouraged to discuss this problem with their veterinarian.

1970 AG YEARBOOK

"Contours of Change" is the title of the recently released 1970 Yearbook of Agriculture. It is a book which every American should find both interesting and full of information they can appreciate. Copies are available from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, for $3.50 per copy. Each member of Congress also has a limited number of copies for free distribution.

CUCURBIT PRODUCTION

One of the major reasons cucurbits fail to produce properly is the scarcity of honey bees to take care of the pollination job. This is especially true for backyard plots in the larger cites, where bees lack natural nesting places. The most commonly grown cucurbits are melons, cucumbers and squash.

HORSE SHORT COURSE

The 9th annual Horse Short Course will be held Nov. 20-21 at Texas A&M University. B.F. Registration will begin at College Station's Ramada Inn at 1 p.m., Nov. 20 with the first scheduled session set for 7 p.m.

4-H CLUB

By Danny Phillips

4-H in Texas is taking on a new look. Plans are underway to develop 4-H Club work in the state into an "in-depth" program.

The new plan has been outlined by Dr. Ed Schlutt, associate state 4-H Club leader, to county Extension Service personnel and adult 4-H leaders at recent gatherings throughout the state.

The new plan has a two-fold objective:

1. To reach a larger number of youth, and
2. To develop meaningful programs.

4-H leaders outlined these basic ingredients of the plan:

1. A dynamic action program at the local club level.
2. Adult leaders working more closely with youth, and county Extension agents working more closely with youth, and county Extension agents working more closely with adult leaders.
3. More involvement of junior or teen leaders.

"The new 4-H program must especially be aimed at the interests of youth -- creation, action, learning and fun," said Schlutt. "New programs must be developed that are meaningful and that meet the present day needs of our youth. They should feel self-satisfaction or self - attainment in 4-H Club work," he added.

Schlutt cited the major needs of 4-H today as the development of adult leaders, special programs for teenagers, a broader scope for 4-H, more recognition at the local club level and a more appealing image of 4-H.

"In 4-H our major concern is the development of boys and girls," contended Schlutt. "Our youth are Texas' most valuable resource, and we must dedicate ourselves to their development and well-being."

"Although 4-H enrollment across Texas has not changed drastically over the past years, there are encouraging signs", said Schlutt. "For instance, adults and teenagers are becoming more interested and involved in 4-H. Since 1960, the number of adult 4-H leaders has increased from 11,000 to 14,000."

"We need to involve more people at all levels in 4-H club work," said Schlutt. "This includes Extension personnel, lay leaders and the 4-H'ers themselves."

The District 4-H Council and a representative group of adult leaders throughout the District will meet December 5 to learn more details of the new plan. It is hoped that as many adult leaders as possible from Milam County will attend.

ASCS NEWS

By Alva E. Sanders

It is suggested that now is a good time for farmers to bring up to date farm records which are maintained in their County ASCS Office.

Records are kept on farms participating in government programs administered by ASCS. A farmer who was in any program in 1970 and who has bought, sold, leased, rented, or otherwise acquired or disposed of farmland should visit his County ASCS Office to report the transactions.

Previous farm legislation is expiring and Congress is expected to take up proposed new farm legislation when it reconvenes this month. Whatever farm programs are passed, farmers will want to be sure their farm records are accurate and complete when the programs go into effect.

County ASCS Offices are required to keep records on acreage of all farms where owners or operators participate in any ASCS - administered program. These include programs for feed grain, wheat, cotton, and peanuts in years when proportionate shares are in effect. In addition, ASCS - administered farm programs including price - support on such commodities as honey.

If a farm is constituted differently now than it was when the farmer began program participation, and if he hasn't yet reported the change, he should do so as soon as possible. Also, if a farm has changed owners or operators in that period, a report should be made to the County ASCS Office.

Changes in the operations of farms need be reported only by farmers participating in one or more farm programs administered by ASCS.

Higher prices for consumer services, apparel, and houses accounted for almost all of the 0.4 percent increase in the Consumer Price Index for September.

The U. S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that the CPI was 5.6 percent above a year ago.

Food prices, which declined slightly in August, rose 0.4 percent and prices of nonfood commodities rose at a faster pace.

Prices of new cars declined much less than is normal for this time of year. Used car prices dropped. Gasoline prices increased, apparel prices were up substantially, and prices of houses rose significantly for the second month in a row.

Charges for consumer prices advanced 0.6 percent - the same as August. Prices for transportation services were sharply higher due to increased automobile insurance rates and airplane, train and local transit fares.

Increases in mortgage interest costs. prices of home maintenance and repair services, and property taxes were factors in the increase in the cost of household services.

Charges for medical care and other services continued to rise.

About 70,000 workers will receive cost - of - living wage increases based on the CPI for

Many Factors Influence Consumption Of Meat

There are several factors which influence the per capita consumption of meat in the United States but, explains Ed Uvacek, Extension livestock marketing specialist, none is more important than meat production.

How is the per capita consumption of meat figured in the first place? Uvacek says it's simple; namely, meat production plus imports, minus meat exports, divided by the human population.

Since imports are small and exports insignificant, the really important factor then is meat production.

Larger productions of beef, for example, tend to raise the per capita consumption level as long as they are greater than the population growth.

Beef consumption per capita is expected to reach 114 pounds this year compared with 110 pounds last year, notes the specialist.

Income is another factor Uvacek relates as highly important to meat consumption. As per capita income (after taxes) rises, meat consumption usually increases, he says. This relationship is much more pronounced for certain cuts such as steaks and roasts and less evident for items like bacon and ham.

Price has a major influence on meat consumption levels and the usual pattern -- as prices rise -- meat consumption moves lower. Consumption of specific meat cuts, however, varies considerably in their reaction to price changes, explains Uvacek.

Research indicates that the consumer's occupation also affects consumption habits. Laborers, for example, tend to eat more meat than white-collar workers.

Where one lives also influences the types of meat and the amount consumed, notes Uvacek.

City dwellers, in general, eat more meat than rural people. Regional differences in meat consumption habits are real. A person who grew up in the North East U.S. is likely to consume more lamb and heavier beef than is a native Texan, says Uvacek.

Family size and its composition may also play a role in meat consumption. In general, explains the specialist, teenagers in a family usually eat more meat while older people consume very little. As a rule, the per capita consumption of meat decreases as family size increases, says Uvacek.

Race, religion and nationality are cited as greatly affecting the meat consumption habits of people. The season of the year also comes in for consideration and is most important when specific cuts of meat are considered.

The spring and summer "cook out" season brings much stronger demands for hamburgers, steaks and hot dogs while roasts and stews are winter-time favorites.

And finally, says Uvacek, meat consumption is a rather complicated process that yeilds a single simple figure but one that had best not be misinterpreted.

SCS News

"There was no need for crop fertilization when the blackland prairie soils were first plowed," states Walter Huckabee, soil scientist with the Soil Conservation Service in Temple.

They contained all the organic matter that nature had put into them during many thousands of years. All the organic matter from the prairie grasses that grew on the land went back into it. The soil was mellow and fertile.

When man took over the management of these soils, he grew large acreages of cotton, corn, and other grain crops. Often he burned the cotton stalks and grain straw, and where the land sloped he allowed erosion to carry away much of the black topsoil.

As a result, through almost a century of use, most of these soils lost much of the organic matter they originally contained. Our soils now require careful management and well planned system of farming for the addition of much organic matter to the soil.

The nutrient supply must be balanced by regular additions of necessary fertilizer elements. There is a general shortage of nitrogen, phosphorus, and potash in blackland soils, and many crops are now being grown on a starvation diet.

Nitrogen is needed to: give dark green color to plants, promote leaf, stem and fruit or seed growth, improve quality of leaf crops, produce rapid growth, increase protein content of food and feed crops, and feed soil micro - organisms during their decomposition of low - nitrogen organic materials.

Phosphorus is needed to: stimulate early root formation and growth, give rapid and vigorous start to plants, hasten maturity, stimulate blooming and aids in seed formation, and give winter hardness to fall - seeded grains and hay crops.

Super - phosphate is the principal carrier of available phosphoric acid; this material alone accounting for more than 90 percent of all phosphoric acid guaranteed in fertilizers.

Our soils are far richer in potash than in nitrogen or phosphoric acid. Unfortunately, most of the potash is locked up in the soil in forms that plants cannot readily use.

Potash is needed to: impart vigor and disease resistance to plants, produce strong, stiff stalks, thus reduce lodging, increase plumpness of the grain and seed, help in the formation and transfer of starches, sugars, and oils, and impart winter hardness to legumes and other crops.

Soils should be tested to see how much of each of the fertilizer componants will be needed.

Most of the fertilizers applied in this area are applied in the "fall" time of the year. Weather conditions and timing are the main reasons for application at this time. Your local Soil Conservationist can discuss your fertilizer needs and organic matter maintenance with you.

Nutrition Jargon

Just what do the terms "adequate nutrition," "malnutrition" and "hunger" really mean? "Adequate nutrition" is the body's use of essential nutrients in the amounts and proportions necessary for optimum health throughout life. "Malnutrition" encompasses undernutrition, overnutrition and nutrient imbalance. Health and physiological functions are impaired by undernutrition or insufficient intake of one or more essential nutrients and overnutrition or excessive consumption of one or more essential nutrients. Nutrient imbalance can be a result of either under- or overnutrition. "Hunger" is synonymous with undernutrition, and the advanced form is starvation which leads to wasting of body tissues and eventually death.

A weekly public service feature from the Texas State Department of Health

Accent on Health

J.E. PEAVY, M.D., Commissioner of Health

A major effort toward drug abuse education and prevention has been launched by the Texas State Department of Health.

The Department's Division of Food and Drugs and Public Health Education Division are cooperating in the development of new programs and services for the citizens of Texas.

The State Health Department is planning a series of 10 regional seminars on drug abuse and its community health implications. The first one is scheduled November 17 in State Health Department Region 7, headquartered in Tyler. Health professionals and community officials from the 36-county East Texas region will be eligible to attend the one-day seminar in the auditorium of the East Texas TV Hospital Annex.

The seminar will focus on the health aspects of drug abuse, detail current programs underway, and examine possible future directions a local and state campaign against drug abuse may take. The course content will include a history of drug traffic, the problem today, current state attack, and how communities can be organized. State Health Commissioner Dr. James E. Peavy will keynote the program.

The faculty will include a nationally - known drug abuse expert, Dr. Joe Schoolar of the Texas Research Institute, a unit of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation. The health aspects of drug use and abuse, and current research, will be emphasized.

The State Health Department also is deeply involved in other drug abuse programs. Department personnel, working in the Governor's Task Force on Drug Abuse, are involved in the planning and development of a coordinated statewide, inter - agency attack on drug problems. They will be participants on Interagency Community Assistance Teams.

With the assistance of KUHT and the University of Houston, the State Health Department has produced a one-hour film that will be released to statewide television this fall. The film vividly portrays the scope of the problem in Texas and the reaction of parents and students to the use, misuse and abuse of legal and illegal drugs.

Purpose of the film is to stimulate communities and organizations to action.

Commission Will Study Legislature

AUSTIN

Speaker Gus Mutscher has challenged his select Committee of 100 to make an in depth study of the Texas Legislature with particular emphasis on the workings of the House and to return a report that will be a "landmark in legislative modernization."

Mutscher said he felt "this important task can best be undertaken by what we'd call an 'outside group' of interested and concerned Texans rather than by a committee of legislators, in order that we may have the benefit of a fresher, more objective review of what we have and what is needed."

The Speaker's challenge was made at the organizational meeting of the Committee of 100 to Study the Legislator's Duties, Responsibilities, Compensation and Ethics held October 29 in Austin.

Chairman of the blue ribbon group is former Atty. Gen. Waggoner Carr. Rep. R. H. (Dick) Cory of Victoria is vice chairman.

Carr endorsed Mutscher's four - point program of study and emphasized that the committee "with nothing to gain but good government can uniquely assist the members of the House in such internal and individual matters as efficiency, standards of conduct, compensation and duties."

The committee is scheduled to complete its studies and make recommendations to the 62nd Legislature when it convenes next January.

Mutscher called for four areas of study:

--The duties, responsibilities and compensation of legislators.

--The standards of conduct of state representatives.

--The facilities available to aid the legislative process

--The internal security measures necessary for the capitol complex.

New Wallpaper Is Easy To Clean

By Christine Laws

Nope, not even children with crayons and dirty hands can damper the fashionable designs of the new durable, washable, scrubbable wallpapers.

Actually, the new wallpaper isn't necessarily paper at all. It may be a vinyl fabric, or if it is paper, it is commonly treated with a vinyl coating. The vinyl fabrics and coating convert a once onerous chore into a quick and easy task of wiping off most any type of soil -- from fingerprints to kitchen grease splatters.

The designs of the vinyl wallpapers come in many styles. Some of the papers have flocked patterns, giving a velvet appearance. Some have the new "wet look" that resembles patent leather.

The patterns, which range from formal French to the very informal contemporary, includes stripes, stylized flowers, paisleys or even murals that look like hand painted walls.

The new wallpapers are prepasted, so decorating with them doesn't require professional help. Simply wet the paper and stick it to the wall. It's particularly easy if doing only a small area or one wall.

STORING VEGETABLES

Any homemaker can preserve the appetizing goodness of fresh vegetables by properly storing them. Original quality, storage temperature, humidity and care in handling are important factors that determine effective storing. For example, pinching and rough handling will damage tomatoes.

Fresh vegetables should be bought on the basis of eating quality, food value, intended use and cost. Varieties of vegetables are also important for satisfying individual tastes. For instance, varieties differ in the pungency of onions or peppers and in the quality of sweet corn or snap beans.

Most fresh vegetables keep best in the refrigerator. But prolonged chilling below 50 degrees will injure many warm season vegetables such as cucumbers, egg plant, okra and sweet peppers.

Many fresh vegetables, packaged in ventilated film bags, can be refrigerated in such bags to help reduce moisture loss.

Cleaning and chilling vegetables makes them crisp and ready for quick use. So before storing in the refrigerator, all vegetables should be washed in cool water. Pre-packaged vegetables may be washed just before cooking.

When washing green leafy vegetables, use plenty of water. Agitate the leaves under water then lift the greens out as grit settles to the bottom of the sink or pan. Drain thoroughly and quickly, then shake to remove excess moisture.

A vegetable crisper will cut down on moisture loss if it is at least two-thirds filled. If not, place vegetables in plastic bags before storing in the crisper.

Special Meeting Called To Organize Boy Scout Troops

There will be a meeting at Progressive Baptist Church at 6 p.m. Monday, November 9, to organize Cub Scouting and Boy Scouting.

Parents of boys age 8 to 18 are urged to attend the meeting with their sons.

Ron Derry, Tejas District Scout Executive, said "Unfortunately this past week there was an incident in which Negro boys were turned away from joining a Scout unit in Cameron.

"These boys can have an equal opportunity to benefit from the Scouting program if sufficient people appear at this called meeting to enable organization of Scout units for the boys," Derry said.

Fast, Hot and Salty

Hot seawater moving at high velocities presents one of the most severe corrosion tests for shipboard materials. However, copper-nickel piping systems for shipboard cooling last the 20-to 25-year life of a ship.

PERSONALS—

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Obermiller attended the Lawrence Welk show at the Coliseum in Houston, Thursday, Oct. 29. They were guests of their daughter, Mrs. Ilynn Fuchs and family. Rebecca, Laura, and Kenneth Fuchs returned to Cameron to attend a birthday dinner honoring their paternal grandfather, Mr. Leo Fuchs on Saturday night.

Canned Stew Creates Meal Masterpiece

A good fall meal should fill you up, warm you up, and taste good, too. Often, though, you don't have time to sit down and plan these memorable meals, let alone prepare them.

It's times like these when it's nice to have a can of stew around the house. Take a can of stew, add a touch of wine, a pinch of herbs and you've a culinary masterpiece in short order.

Here we show canned chicken stew spiced with pungent clove, accompanied by Pecan Squash.

Like the stew, this squash takes only minutes to prepare. Just combine frozen squash with chopped pecans and brown sugar and heat. Pour into individual dishes, top with miniature marshmallows, and brown under the broiler.

Complete this memorable meal with a dessert of fresh fruit and plenty of milk and coffee.

PUNGENT CHICKEN STEW

1 can (19 ounces) chicken stew
Generous dash ground cloves

In saucepan, combine stew and cloves. Heat; stir now and then. Makes 2 to 3 servings.

PECAN SQUASH

1 package (12 ounces) frozen cooked squash

¼ cup chopped pecans

Generous dash ground nutmeg

¾ cup miniature marshmallows

Prepare squash as directed on package adding pecans and nutmeg. Place squash in 3 individual baking dishes (6-ounce size); top with marshmallows. Broil 4 inches from heat until browned. Makes 3 servings.

Waco Symphony Opens With Beethoven Concert

The Waco Symphony Orchestra will open its season Monday, Nov. 9, with an all-Beethoven concert in Waco Hall for which pianist Gary Graffman will be the guest artist.

He and the orchestra, conducted by Daniel Sternberg, will play Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 4. The orchestra will also play his Overture to Coriolanus and Symphony No. 3 (Eroica).

The American-born Graffman was recently called by Time Magazine "the top American pianist in his age group."

In the 21 years of his professional career, he has won many laurels but the one most prized was the one that first established him as a professional worth of notice, the famed Leventritt Award in New York City which carries with it an appearance with the New York Philharmonic.

Other artists for the Waco Symphony season are violinist James Oliver Buswell IV on Jan. 25 and Metropolitan Opera soprano Gabriella Tucci on March 1.

Season tickets, at $12.50 and $10 on the main floor of Waco Hall, $10 for first balcony and $5 for second balcony, may be ordered from the Waco Symphony Association, P.O. Box 62, Waco. Tickets for the single concert, if any remain, will not be sold until the day of the concert. They will be available then only at the box office in Waco Hall.

Teen Diet

In the active world of teenagers adequate diets often are forgotten. Six out of ten teenage girls and four out of ten teenage boys have poor diets because of their eating habits. Among the reasons for these improper diets are: skipping breakfast, eating nutritionally poor snacks, believing that eating makes one fat and considering outside activities more important than eating.

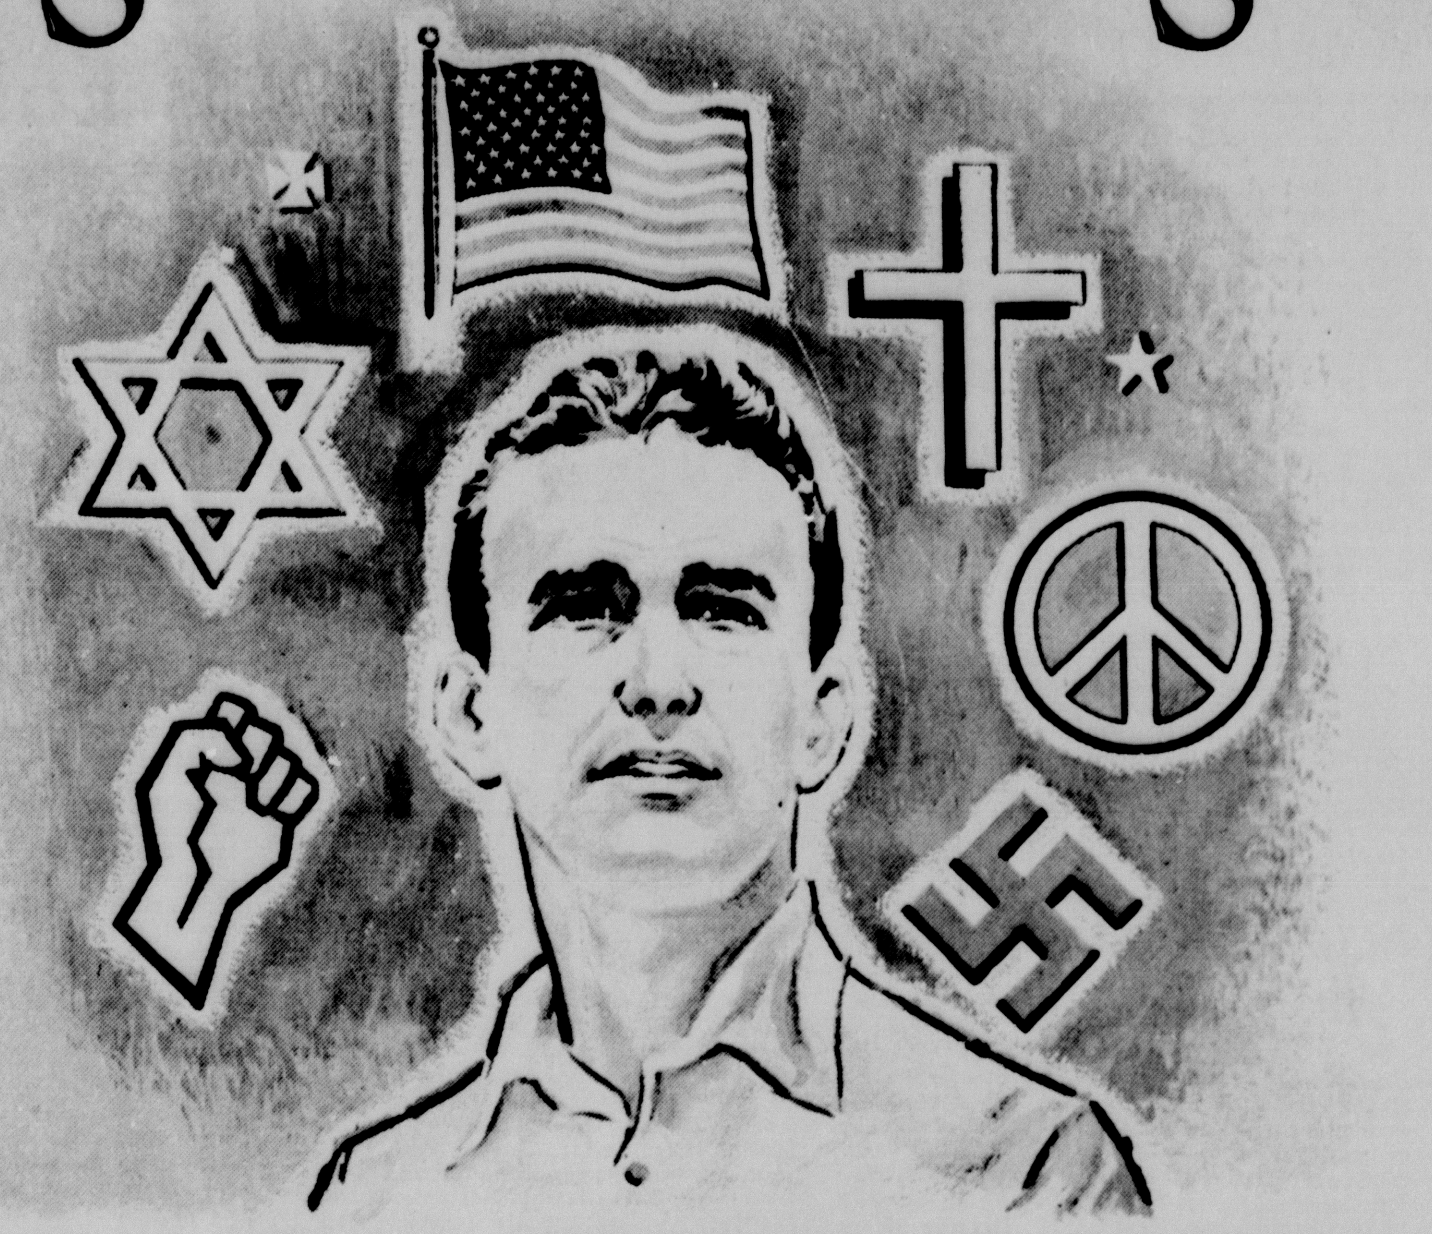
SYMBOLS



...the world is full of them. National symbols, political symbols, religious symbols for most every type, race, creed, organization or business. It's getting so that we automatically judge a person by the symbol he wears. "See that man with the Star of David? He's a Jew. The one with the Cross is a Christian. Look at that guy wearing flowers, ...he's a hippie. Those with clinched fists are black power advocates. Donkeys are for Democrats, elephants for Republicans."

Everyone knows that. Yes, but what if the symbols were to disappear? Ah, there's the rub. Then, just how could we know what a person really is? Even more important, would we know?

Check your life today...right now. Are you depending on symbols to identify you, to get you through? Do your actions read well? For sake of the record, just what manner of man are you? In the final analysis, only your actions, your life will tell. Attend church this week. It'll make a big difference.
